What is a creative playspace?

An outdoor creative play space features ‘toys’ that are more material than toy.

Children move and use the loose parts to play dynamically, constructing and evolve their play space along with their play.

An emphasis on natural, reclaimed, repurposed parts. For obvious reasons.

unrestricted, natural movement of the physical and social variety

Creative playspaces feature materials that children can move and use to construct and re-construct their play environment. , , sometimes called ‘loose parts’, that children can use to interact directly with their play environment. The materials can be used to build the Bear Tavern Den

Wonder and inquiry leads to authentic play, authentic learning.

This space is designed to nurture student learning through wonder and inquiry, supported by intentional teacher questioning. It will foster critical thinking, social, and communication skills that naturally extend into the classroom and broader community.

By encouraging creativity and open-ended exploration rather than rigid direction-following, the space invites students to lead, listen, take turns, take risks, collaborate, problem-solve, and think critically in meaningful and authentic ways.
